Butterfly Table Mat.

Such mats are generally made in sets of 5—1 large, 2 smaller and 2 still smaller ones—of fine macrame cord or cotton, and are generally of one color, though two may be used. For the largest size make a chain of 34 stitches, for the middle size a chain of 27 and for the smallest size a chain of 20. These chains are at the middle of the mats. After making the foundation chain of the length desired, turn, skip 3 stitches and then make 1 double crochet in each of the remaining stitches, making 7 doubles in the end stitch; then work double crochets along the other side of the chain until the end is reached, and in the end stitch make 7 doubles to correspond with the first 7, and join to the top of the first double crochet made. Now make 2 chain, skip 1 stitch and work a double in the back of every stitch until within 1 double from the 7 doubles; then in each of the 7 doubles make 3 doubles, skip 1 and work the other side and end to correspond. The mat is made round and round, and in every row of the plain doubles 1 stitch is skipped at each side of each end. The scallops are worked as follows: For the 3d row work in the center of each group of the 3 doubles in the 2d row, 4 doubles with 1 chain between the 2d and 3d stitches. In the next row make 6 doubles, separated similarly in the middle by 1 chain, in the next row 8 similar doubles, and so on, increasing by 2 doubles in every group of each row until the mat is of the required size. Chain work for edge: Make chains of 3 stitches caught with a single in every other stitch along the sides until the 1st scallops are reached, make similar chains down the side of the scallop and back again, catching them around the stitches in the spaces; continue around the edge of the scallop, and then down and back as before between the 1st and 2d scallops, and so on around the ends, making the same number of chains along the edge of each scallop. These chains, if worked in a contrasting color, will give a very good representation of a butterfly. Mrs B.

No 32. Venetian trim.

Cast on three loops. Twist the wool end round the right hand needle, and knit two together, then knit one. You have then upon the needle, the loop stitch which forms the pretty edge, and two others. Backward and forward every row is the same. All that is necessary is to take care that the loop stitch is properly and regularly done. This simple and easy pattern is very pretty and cunning if you do it with the same color that the dress is to go round the yoke of a child's dress. End.

No 32. Knitted trimmings

Cast on three loops. Twist the wool once round the right hand needle, and knit two together, then knit one. You have then upon the needle, the loop stitch which forms the pretty edge, and two others. Backward and forward every row is the same. All that is necessary is to take care that the loop stitch is properly and regularly done. This simple and easy pattern is very pretty and cunning if you do it with the same color that the dress is to go round the yoke of a child's dress. End.

CLOVER-LEAF EDGING.

CHAIN eight. Turn.

1. Make a shell of three trebles, two chain, and three trebles in the fourth stitch. Chain two, skip three. Shell in last stitch. Chain three. Turn.

2. Always shell in shell. Chain two. Shell, one treble in end chain. Chain three. Turn.

3. Shell. Chain two. Shell. Chain twelve, one double in sixth stitch to form a loop. Turn.

* Chain five, one double in loop. Repeat twice. Be careful to make the last double where the loop is joined to prevent slipping. Turn. Make one double and five trebles in first loop. Drop stitch and catch the three chain between the first and second shells in the border, then continue five trebles and one double in same loop, one double, ten trebles, one double in second loop the first time (afterwards, after making five trebles, drop stitch and join to the center of first clover leaf, and continue five trebles, one double). Make one double, ten trebles, one double in third loop, which completes the clover leaf. Make one double and ten trebles for stem on the empty chain to reach the border.

4. Shell. Chain two. Shell, one treble at end. Chain three. Turn.

5. Shell. Chain two. Shell. Chain three. Turn.

Begin at the second row. The clover leaves occur every fourth row after the first. There are many different styles of this pattern. The simplest has one row of shells above, another has two rows of leaves below, joined to a fancy braid at the top and the shells omitted. In this case a row of trebles must be made on the top of the braid, and the additional row of leaves is begun after finishing the second petal of the first leaf. Four rows makes quite an elaborate design, and a wide braid should be used or two rows of shells.

4. Shell, one double in end. Chain twelve, one double in seventh for loop. Turn. * Chain six, one double in loop. Repeat twice. Fasten in first. Turn, one double, six trebles in loop. Fasten between first and second shell, six trebles, one double in same loop, one double, twelve trebles, one double in next two loops, six doubles on chain for stem, one double in end of shell. Chain three, shell, one double in end. Chain three. Turn. Begin at second row. Always join the clover leaves in the center of second petal.

FANCY WORK.

Shower of daisies, by Beth, requested
—A shower of daisies is a pretty decoration for hanging on the mirror of a bureau. These are admired by all and very easily made. The materials are 1-16 of a yard of white felt, 8 or 9 common shirt buttons, a small piece of coarse yellow plush, and 3 yards of green baby ribbon. The felt is cut in rounds 2 inches in diameter, then slashed into petals, with the addition of a button at the center covered with yellow plush. A very "daisy" like appearance is given. Each daisy is then fastened to green baby ribbon of different lengths. Fasten all securely together at the tops. They are very lovely, and I wish to say to Beth, if I had time to make them I would have a shower in many places. Tulips made of light yellow, red and pink felt are also lovely suspended from pictures and mirrors. Autumn.
